Artane residents group calls on communities to give back to St Michael's House

The Ardmore-Montrose Residents Association in Artane is calling on other community groups to support their local St Michael's House and "give back to the people."

St Michael's House is a charity which runs a number of services for adults and children with additional educational or physical needs.

They also run residential services and homes where adults live, have a daily routine and take part in the local community.

On the night of the Late Late Toy Show, the local group held a pizza night for residents who live at the nearby house.

"We often see the residents around the community helping out," says Dwayne Tuite a member of the Ardmore-Montrose Residents Association.

"We would know them by their name and interact with them," he says. "They're essentially a part of the local community."

The group runs two events with the St

Michael's House every year - one at Christmas and one at Easter.

"If you have a St Michael's House in your area, integrate the residents," Tuite says.

"Give back to the house and help out."
